It was years after launching Repris before I decided to put my family's name Momtazee on a bottle. There were reasons at the time that the multi-generational aspect of family was top of mind to me, and the similarities to the multi-generational aspect of a vineyard and a winery felt like the perfect way to acknowledge that connection. The Momtazee was designed from the beginning to be the wine that the Moon Mountain Vineyard wanted to make in the vintages that were worthy of that expression. After years of work by the highly talented team here, I now look at a vineyard restored to its full promise that screams out in most years with a wine that we believe is worth showcasing.

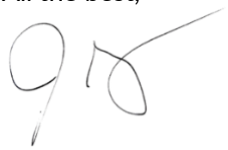

When a group of us came together to establish the Moon Mountain District over thirteen years ago, we wanted wine drinkers to recognize the distinctiveness of this wine-growing region. All of those there at the beginning advocating for this appellation farmed organically. I am proud to say that at this point nearly half the district is now certified organic, which is one of the highest percentages of any appellation in California.

Our winemaker Erich Bradley describes 2023 as a long, cool growing season that allowed the fruit to ripen slowly on the mountain. The winemaking team assembled the wine from what we view as the best lots Moon Mountain Vineyard produced that year and produced a wine consisting of 85% Cabernet Sauvignon, 14% Merlot, and 1% Petit Verdot. The wine is aged 21 months in barrel (70% new oak) and was bottled in June 2025. The Momtazee is always designed to reveal itself slowly, and we believe that with fifteen years or more in the cellar, it will reveal layers that are only hinted at today.

For the first time, Momtazee is available in standard format 750-milliliter bottles, offered in three-bottle original wooden cases. We have also updated our bottle design across the entire portfolio. The goal is for this presentation to express the classicism and timelessness that guides all things we do including farming, winemaking, and respect for the land.

I am pleased to announce the release of the 2023 Momtazee at a moment we view as a turning point for Repris. I look forward to sharing it with you.

All the best,

Jim Momtazee
